STATEMENT OF AMICI INTEREST

The States of Idaho and Oklahoma and 47 other States write to urge the Court to grant certiorari in this case.¹ This brief focuses upon the first question presented by the Petitioners, addressing the application of the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment to the United States Constitution to the Pledge of Allegiance.

The decision of the Ninth Circuit – holding that “the school district’s policy and practice of teacher-led recitation of the Pledge, with the inclusion of the added words ‘under God,’ violates the Establishment Clause,” U.S. Pet. App. at 17a – conflicts with opinions and observations made by this Court and individual Justices in Establishment Clause cases, with a decision issued by the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, and with numerous rulings and observations made by United States District Courts since 1954. Moreover, 41 states have laws, and three more states have recently passed laws, similar to the California law underlying the Newdow case, providing for recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance in public schools.

The Ninth Circuit’s opinion is a startling departure from Establishment Clause jurisprudence, as complex as that body of law might be. Left alone, the Ninth Circuit’s opinion “bans the voluntary recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance in the public schools of the nine western states thereby directly affecting over 9.6 million students, necessarily implies that both an Act of Congress and a California law are unconstitutional, . . . and threatens cash-strapped school districts and underpaid teachers with the specter of civil actions for money damages pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983.” U.S. Pet. App. at 68a-69a (emphasis in original; footnotes and citations omitted). Before Newdow, the boundaries of the Establishment Clause in the public school setting were clearly understood to protect the Pledge of Allegiance and similar patriotic exercises. Accordingly, the States urge this Court to grant the petitions and consider summary reversal of the Ninth Circuit’s judgment.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

The Ninth Circuit’s decision defies a nation.² It begs this Court to exercise judicial discretion in favor of granting the petitions for two compelling reasons consistent with Rule 10 of the Supreme Court Rules. First, the Newdow decision is of nationwide interest, as that interest is expressed in public policy through the laws of 41 states. Second, the Newdow decision clearly conflicts with the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals’ decision in Sherman v. Community Consol. Sch. Dist. 21, 980 F.2d 437 (7th Cir.

² Shortly after the Ninth Circuit’s original decision in Newdow, the attorneys general of 50 states and territories sent a letter to the Clerk of the Ninth Circuit, in support of the State of California’s motion for rehearing with suggestion for en banc review. See 9th Cir. R. 25-2 (communications to the court). The letter, dated July 23, 2002, was not made a part of the record in this case, but it was discussed at a congressional hearing and made a part of the committee record. Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals Reorganization Act of 2001: Hearing on H.R. 1203 Before the Subcomm. on Courts, the Internet, and Intellectual Property of the House Comm. on the Judiciary, 107th Cong., 2nd Sess., 11, 91-96 (2002) (statement of Alan G. Lance, former Idaho Attorney General (1995-2003), submitting the letter to the subcommittee for the record).

1992), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 950 (1993). Newdow also conflicts with opinions and observations made by this Court and individual Justices confirming the constitutionality of the Pledge of Allegiance. Indeed, many other federal courts have relied upon these opinions and observations in evaluating Establishment Clause issues in public school settings, including recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance.

I. The Court Should Grant Certiorari Because The Ninth Circuit’s Holding Defies The Common Understanding, Embodied In 41 State Statutes, That The Pledge Is Constitutional.

In its amended opinion, the Ninth Circuit apparently decided that it should narrow its initial holding. In the amended opinion, the Ninth Circuit held the “school district’s policy and practice of teacher-led recitation of the Pledge, with the inclusion of the added words ‘under God,’ violates the Establishment Clause.” U.S. Pet. App. 17a (emphasis added). In its original opinion, the Ninth Circuit explicitly held both the federal statute, 4 U.S.C. § 4 (1998), and the school district policy and practice to be unconstitutional. U.S. Pet. App. 52a. Whether or not this was done “in an effort to avoid ultimate Supreme Court review,” Circuit Judge O’Scannlain is correct in his dissent from the Ninth Circuit’s denial of rehearing en banc when he says, regarding the difference between the holdings, that “the amended decision is every bit as bold as its predecessor.” U.S. Pet. App. 68a.

Teachers in the Elk Grove Unified School District (EGUSD) begin each school day by leading their students in the Pledge of Allegiance. U.S. Pet. App. 2a. As the Ninth Circuit recognized, this practice is “[i]n accordance with state law and a school district rule. . . .” U.S. Pet. App. 2a.

The school district rule requires that “[e]ach elementary school class [shall] recite the pledge of allegiance to the flag once each day.” U.S. Pet. App. 3a. As the Ninth Circuit recognized, the policy was promulgated “[t]o implement the California statute.” U.S. Pet. App. 3a. The California statute requires public schools to “begin each day with ‘appropriate patriotic exercises’ and that ‘[t]he giving of the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America shall satisfy’ this requirement.” U.S. Pet. App. 2a, citing Cal. Educ. Code § 52720 (1989). The Pledge of Allegiance is a creature of federal statute which defines the pledge to contain the words “under God.” 4 U.S.C. § 4.

The EGUSD’s policy and practice do not stand alone and did not originate in the minds of the school board or the teachers. The EGUSD promulgated its policy in order to comply with a mandatory state law that, in turn, depends upon the federal codification of the words that are to be recited each school day. The teachers are simply doing their jobs as required by law.

The California state law is not unusual. Laws providing for recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance in public schools exist in 41 states. See Ala. Code § 16-43-5 (West 2001) (students must be afforded opportunity to recite the pledge); Alaska Stat. § 14.03.130 (2000) (the pledge must be recited regularly by willing students); Ariz. Rev. Stat. ³ The relevant sections of all the cited state laws are appended to this brief in alphabetical order.

The States urge that the Establishment Clause issue is of broad national interest and concern, as reflected through the laws of the states as discussed above. Certainly, the Ninth Circuit's power reaches only so far, but it is not right for the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America to be treated differently in the eyes of the law in our indivisible nation.

II. The Court Should Grant Certiorari Because The Ninth Circuit's Decision Conflicts With Establishment Clause Jurisprudence.

The Petitioners thoroughly set forth the conflict between circuits. U.S. Pet. at 14; EGUSD Pet. at 8-10. In the Sherman case, the Seventh Circuit held that "schools may lead the Pledge of Allegiance daily, so long as pupils are free not to participate." Sherman, 980 F.2d at 439. The Seventh Circuit's decision is consistent with this Court's fundamental requirement of voluntariness enunciated in West Virginia State Bd. of Educ. v. Barnette, 319 U.S. 624, 642 (1943), and it flows unimpeded from observations made by this Court and individual Justices in Establishment Clause cases.

The Petitioners have also thoroughly brought to the Court's attention the fact that the Ninth Circuit's decision is wholly inconsistent with this Court's observations on the Pledge of Allegiance. U.S. Pet. at 14-19; EGUSD Pet. at 8-10. The Ninth Circuit, however, dismissed this Court's statements as dicta and claimed, incredibly, that its holding was "not inconsistent with this dicta." U.S. Pet. App. at 15a.

With roots in what Circuit Judge O'Scannlain described as the "fountainhead of all school prayer cases," this Court has consistently commented favorably upon the Pledge of Allegiance. U.S. Pet. App. at 71a. In Engel v. Vitale, 370 U.S. 421 (1962), the Court described the boundaries of its holding by explaining that school children may recite historical documents or sing officially espoused anthems which contain references to God because “[s]uch patriotic or ceremonial occasions bear no true resemblance to the unquestioned religious exercise” of directing students to recite a prayer composed by state officials. Engel, 370 U.S. at 435 n.21. The observations made thereafter by this Court and individual Justices concerning the Pledge of Allegiance flow directly from the Establishment Clause boundary set in Engel.

Dicta is defined as a judicial opinion “which does not embody the resolution or determination of the court.” Black’s Law Dictionary 408 (5th ed. 1979). Admittedly, in County of Allegheny v. ACLU, 492 U.S. 573 (1989), the Court said its previous characterizations of the pledge and national motto as being consistent with the Establishment Clause were dicta, but in the next breath the Court once again returned to the understood boundaries of the Establishment Clause by saying there is an “obvious difference between crèche displays and references to God in the motto and the pledge.” County of Allegheny, 492 U.S. at 602.

The States urge that, whether or not considered dicta in a technical sense, the Supreme Court’s observations on the Pledge were and are integral to the Establishment Clause issue. The statements were not unrelated to the main issue – they were not musings hidden in a footnote of an Admiralty Clause case. The Court’s analytical observations served a vital function by setting a clear boundary and assisting the public’s understanding of the Court’s decision.

The Ninth Circuit’s decision can hardly be characterized as “not inconsistent with” the Supreme Court’s and individual Justices’ comments upon the application of the Establishment Clause to the Pledge of Allegiance. The Ninth Circuit held the Pledge of Allegiance to be unconstitutional. This Court has said, or at least strongly implied, that it is not. To brush aside this Court's written history and then deny that anything inconsistent with that history has occurred is indeed "wrong, very wrong." U.S. Pet. App. at 67a.

Many other federal courts have cited and relied upon the Engel line of cases in commenting and ruling upon the Pledge of Allegiance. The Ninth Circuit decision is a lonely one that goes against the considered judgments and analyses of numerous other federal courts.

Somewhat ironically, the earliest published federal case to have directly addressed an Establishment Clause challenge to the 1954 version of the Pledge of Allegiance came from California. Smith v. Denny, 280 F. Supp. 651 (E.D. Cal. 1968), appeal dismissed, 417 F.2d 614 (1969).⁴ Therein, the court resisted plaintiffs' invitation to remove the words "under God" from the Pledge of Allegiance, and ruled it to be consistent with the Free Exercise Clause and the Establishment Clause. Smith, 280 F. Supp. at 654. In so doing, the court relied heavily upon Engel.⁵ Smith, 280 F. Supp. at 653.

⁴ The Ninth Circuit dismissed the appeal because the plaintiffs' interest in the litigation ended when their children graduated from high school. Smith, 417 F.2d at 614.

Most recently, the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia upheld a similar, albeit broader, challenge to the Pledge of Allegiance. Myers v. Loudoun County Sch. Bd., No. CIV02-1528-A, 2003 WL 21011172 (E.D. Va. Feb. 21, 2003). Therein, the court ruled the Pledge of Allegiance was neither a violation of the Establishment Clause, nor a violation of the Free Exercise Clause. The Myers case was issued seven days before the Ninth Circuit denied rehearing and issued its amended opinion in Newdow.

A number of other federal courts have commented favorably on the Pledge, in a manner similar to that of this Court in defining the boundaries of the Establishment Clause in the public school setting and helping the public to understand the reach of the judgment. See Glassroth v. Moore, 229 F. Supp.2d 1290, 1308 (M.D. Ala. 2002) (distinguishing “ceremonial deisms” from public acknowledgments of a sectarian God); ACLU of Tenn. v. Rutherford County, Tenn., 209 F. Supp.2d 799, 814 (M.D. Tenn. 2002) (listing the Pledge of Allegiance as one of at least twelve examples of permissible government acknowledgments of the role of religion in American life); *Doe v. Ky. 2000) (discussion of ceremonial deisms); ACLU of Ky. v. Pulaski County, Ky., 96 F. Supp.2d 691, 700 (E.D. Ky. 2000) (discussion of ceremonial deisms); Books v. City of Elkhart, Ind., 79 F. advancing religion); Smith v. Lindstrom, 699 F. Supp. 549, 571-72 (W.D. Va. 1988), aff'd, 895 F.2d 953 (4th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 823 (1990) (discussion of de minimus entanglements between church and state); Jewish War Veterans of the U.S. v. United States, 695 F. Supp. 3, 11 (D. D.C. 1988) (listing the pledge as an example of a government reference to God that does not violate the Establishment Clause); Reed v. Van Hoven, 237 F. Supp. 48, 56 (W.D. Mich. 1965) (“the pledge of allegiance and patriotic songs or readings are permissible at any time, provided they are voluntary”).

This body of federal law is uniform and thorough with respect to the application of the Establishment Clause to the Pledge of Allegiance and other similarly patriotic exercises that are intended to honor the United States of America. The Ninth Circuit’s decision stands alone against the weight of rulings and observations made by the Supreme Court, individual Justices, the Seventh Circuit, and numerous lower federal courts.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the amici States urge the Court to grant the petitions and consider summary reversal.
